feeling at work

We could try to make it complicated. But like most really useful innovations, Link is incredibly simple. A plug & play USB-C docking station that provides all the connectivity options you need, within arm's reach on your workstation. Arrive at work with your laptop, plug it in and you're fully connected.

A familiar problem, simply solved.

Being on-the-go, hot desking, flexible workspaces and agile working are increasingly the norm in today's world. But while 80% of organisations globally have embraced mobile work practices, many users consider their 'base station' ill-equipped for the new reality. And they're right.

link.

If only everything at work was so simple.

Link solves that problem. Instantly connecting you USB-C laptop, whatever the brand, to external displays and the data network, while simultaneously charging it. No more fiddling about with multiple cables, no more discovering you've left your charger at home or you're missing the one adaptor you need to connect to the external displays. Just a plug & play USB-C docking station that's stylish, smart and simple. All the connections you'll need for the hardware of today and tomorrow, conveniently available within arm's reach on your desktop.

Easy installation

Installation is just as easy. You can upgrade any Viewlite monitor arm with the Link plug & play USB-C docking station without having to unscrew a thing. Link is also available in a stand-alone version.

Once you've got Link, you'll wonder how you survived without it.
